

ANN CARTER worked for Lafayette's Office of Development & College Relations for 34 years, retiring as Director of Development Communications in 2015. She began her "career" in fundraising in the 1960s as a financial-aid work-study student assigned to the development office at Randolph-Macon Woman's College, from which she received her A.B. in English in 1970. She then took an academic detour to earn M.A. and Ph.D. degrees in English, with a concentration in American Literature, from Case Western Reserve University. After teaching at CWRU and other Cleveland-area institutions, she moved to the Lehigh Valley in 1981 and became the staff writer for Lafayette's development office. In 2006 she received the Cyrus S. Fleck, Jr. '52 Administrator of the Year Award, proudly sharing the honor that year with Diane Shaw, a leader on Lafayette's Queer Archives Project team. Ann is married to Carolynn Van Dyke, and they live in Bethlehem.
