

Jeffrey Finegan
Class of 2017

Since graduation, I have been a resident of Old Town Alexandria, VA, a community into which I have integrated well. As the area is one of the most historic in our nation, it has been a tremendous place to call home, with historical sites such as Mount Vernon a mere five miles from my residence. Mount Vernon has become my weekend home; I generally spend a few hours reading on the piazza, overlooking the Potomac River, sharing the same view the Marquis de Lafayette would have had during his time as a guest at the country estate. Since November, I have been employed by a United States Senator, and have grown my network exponentially on Capitol Hill. I continue to be motivated by a strong interest in advancing sound public policy, and hold hopes of attending Georgetown University for graduate school in the coming couple of years. My success in Washington serves as a stark reminder to never forget the basis for success that Lafayette afforded me.
