

Daniel Reynolds '08 holds bachelor's degrees in English and French from Lafayette College and a master's degree in English with a Writing concentration from Fordham University. He is proud to be a former president of QuEST — Lafayette's LGBTQ student group — and a member of the Lafayette Pride Network for alumni. At Lafayette, he wrote a chapbook of poetry, "The Night Tour," under the guidance of his thesis advisor, Lee Upton. At present, Reynolds is a senior editor at The Advocate, the nation's leading LGBTQ magazine; recent cover stories include interviews with the cast of Will & Grace in advance of the series revival, as well as actors Anthony Rapp and Wilson Cruz, who portray the first gay characters in the Star Trek universe. His writing on queer issues has also appeared in i-D magazine, Out magazine, Plus magazine, and Healthline.com. In his journalism career, Reynolds has interviewed nearly every contestant who has appeared on RuPaul's Drag Race. He currently lives in Los Angeles, where he ran his first marathon in early 2018.
