

Leah Wasacz graduated from Lafayette College in 2016 with a B.A. in English and a minor in a Mathematics. She hails from Wall, NJ. She came out as bisexual and transgender while on campus in 2015 and spent the last months of her college career educating people about and advocating for transgender people. While she attended Lafayette, she was also an active member of the arts community on campus, hosting open mics, serving as editor of the campus literary magazine The Marquis for three years, and earning herself runner-up for the 2016 H. MacKnight Black Poetry Prize. Since graduation, she has pursued work in both her passion for English and her passion for Mathematics. She is currently a writing tutor at Brookdale Community College in Monmouth County, NJ, and the Assistant Center Director for the math learning center Mathnasium of Wall in her hometown. Her poetry has appeared in The Marquis and Sonder Midwest. She is beyond honored to be part of the QAP, and hopes that it will inspire courage, hope, and activism in the queer students at Lafayette for years to come.
