

Jennifer Wellnitz is a PhD student at NC State University studying Computer Science. Her research focuses on emotional agents, procedural content generation, and interactive narrative. She is a graduate of Lafayette College, Class of 2019 and studied Computer science there as well. She also was one of the first student workers on the Queer Archives Project, and helped to develop the data model for the digital humanities site. She is glad to have worked on the project and glad to contribute her interview to it.
